Addiction Intensive
Outpatient Program
(IOP)

Welcome to the Program

Welcome to the Intensive Outpatient Program (IOP) for the treatment of all substance use disorders and co-occurring mental health disorders. We hope your participation in our program will provide you the type of healing experience you seek. We are committed to assisting you in your journey toward sobriety and recovery.

The Chestnut Ridge IOP began in 1990 as an intensive, structured program designed to provide therapy, education, and medical treatment to drug/ alcohol dependent individuals and their family members during early recovery. It is staffed by members of the West Virginia University School of Medicine Department of Behavioral Medicine and Psychiatry.

There is a correlation between the length of outpatient treatment and long-term sobriety. The largest percentage of individuals who relapse do so in the first 90 days. IOP is available to help during this critical period by presenting a forum for recovering individuals to learn and process new behavioral skills and to integrate them into daily living.

The program consists of group therapy, family therapy, and medical groups that meet three days each week. The groups provide participants an opportunity to talk about pertinent issues, obtain education on the recovery process, educate family and friends on the nature of addiction, and referral for necessary medical care. Participants are also seen by an individual therapist on a regular basis.

Group Information

Therapy Group: Participants are encouraged to talk about issues related to addiction as well as those affecting daily life (i.e., marital, family, work, or financial problems). Emily Chilko is the group therapist.

Medical Group: Members meet with a team of physicians and residents to discuss health and medical issues. Sessions include lectures on medical issues related to addictions, proper medical care and medication issues. Referrals for further treatment maybe recommended. Dr. Jeremy Hustead is the medical group leader.

Family Group: Participants are strongly encouraged to bring family members or others close to them. It is well documented that the addicted person impacts the lives of approximately six other people. Information on the nature of addiction and its impact on the family is provided with discussion encouraged. Laura Lander is the lead clinician.

Other Addiction Groups:

IOP Step-Down Group: This is a weekly process group for individuals with substance use disorders who do not need IOP level of care or who have completed IOP. This group helps individuals to forge connections with others in different stages of recovery and provides ongoing support.

COAT(Comprehensive Opioid Addiction Treatment) Program: Individuals with opioid use disorder seeking recovery from substance use may be treated in a weekly clinic that includes drug screening, required self-help attendance, group therapy, and medical management. Appropriateness for the treatment will be established through an intake evaluation.
